TISSS INTERNATIONAL RIVERPRIZE

ADVICE FROM PREVIOUS WINNERS ON APPLYING FOR RIVERPRIZE
“Be thorough in preparing the application package. Remember that what reviewers come to know about a given project or activity is likely limited to what can be gleaned from the application and related submittals. Include copious supporting information to help reviewers and judges understand, assess—and hopefully appreciate—restoration efforts and results.”

“What did you do that was different and unique? How can others learn from it? And what steps were specific to your river or river basin?”

“First, go for it! But on a practical level, I would advise applicants to read the criteria very carefully and make sure you have addressed each one with a specific example. Each project will have its own ‘special thing’ that will set it apart from the others, and it’s important to get that across.”

“When completing the application think holistically and include all the groups within the community that are carrying out activities to support your aims and objectives of waterway improvement.”
